FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 3, 1858

A RUSSIAN WEDDING IN HIGH LIFE. The following letter is from an American citiz in to the editors of the Baltimore Patriot, dated Mescow, Sept. 25th 1858. Messes Epir Rs:-It has occurred to me that it might not prove uninteresting to many of your readers, if I avail myself of a place in your columns to lay before them a brief account of some of the ceremonies and festal incidents of a marriage in Russian "high life," which has lately been celebrated in this vicinity, and at which I had the pleasure of being a welcomed guest.

The families of the "happy pair" are of the "haut noblesse" of the Empire, and possess in addition to their titles and patents of nobility (what we practical people regard with far more respect) immense wealth, which to their credit it must be said, they expend in a generous and refined hospitality, acquitting themselves with bonor of the obligations which their position and fortune bave entailed upon them. The lady (by courtesy she should be named first.) is the second daughter of Prince George Galitzin, and has, in common with her two sisters, inherited the beauty of a mother long celebrated as the reigning belle of Moscow and St. Petersburg. The bridegroom, a Lieutenant of the Hussars of the Imperial Guard, is the eldest son of His Excellency General Nicholas Rumini, Chamberlain to His Majesty, Counsellor of State, Grand Cross of the order of St. Anne, &c., &c., &c., with half a dozen other titles and decorations of no other than local importance or interest. It so happened that the estates of the two families joined, and the season being favorable, it was decided to celebrate the wedding in the country. Their respective friends were there invited to repair to the datch (in English, country seat) of one or the other, and thus was assembled a gay and brilliant s ciety all ready to enjoy the promised pleasures of such an event, and to participate in, and sympathize with the happiness it would impart to both families.

The marriage ceremony took place in the church attached to the estate of the bride's father, and as it only differed from that of the porest peasant in this, that the toilettes and number of attendants were more elegant or more numerous, and as the ceremony in the Greek church is very different from that we are accustomed to see with us, I here insert a short account of the same.

In the first place, supposing the bride and groom to have a certain position, they each provide themselves first with a married lady, a species of god-mother, who replaces the natural parent for the time, also with a gentleman attendant, sometimes more than one, and the lady is sometimes accompanied by bridesmaids. Other sponsers, if you may so call them, and 'garcons des nosces' are necessary; the lady attendants are a luxury. When the toilette of the bride is comple ed she sends her cavalier to announce that fact to the gentleman, who thereupon leaves his house for the church door accompanied by his family and friends, whilst his groomsman hurries off to notify the bride; she similarly escorted repairs to the courch, where she is met by the groom and led within the door .-Here the Priest and Chaunters (all male voices) receive the pair, and the ceremony commences by prayer and chaunting: afterwards the two rings are blessed, exchanged and passed over the finger of each; then the Cr-am, and Rose Lip Salve, just prepared, and will LIAM A HART. officiating clergyman extends to the pair his | for sale by embroidered "stole," which they both grasp and by which they are led three times round the church, or rather round a desk, on which is placed a copy of the g.spels; these they kiss and are then led up to the door of the "ikonostas," in other words the partition which divides the sanctuary and alter from the people, when after more prayers and singing gold crowns are either placed on the heads of the pair, or held over each, by their attendants, no easy task, for this is kept up whilst more prayers are said; another procession is made and the final blessing pronounced, whereupon the usual felicitations are exten-

The parents of the bridggroom take no part and remain, if present, in the back ground. Before the conclusion of the ceremony they horry off to their home, whither also the whole party soon repair. The bridal pair descend first, and the lady is met at the door by her new made relations, bearing in their hands bread and salt, which are tendered and partaken of as emblematical of the welcome they extend to the wife of their sen. All now enter the house, when supper is laid out, after which the bride distributes to each of the guests a box of bon-bons, a most expensive substitute for the boxes of bride's cake handed around with us. These b xes are very handsome, and vary in price according to the means of the party, from $1 to $10 a piece. After this the newly married pair are escorted to their carriage, and leave for their own home, or for an apartment already provided at some hotel.

The foregoing is the outline of the ceremonies on the occasion of the wedding referred to, when all that wealth and refined taste could lend to the interest of the pageant was lavished in profusion.

The day after, a large dinner party of some 60 persons assembled in the specious mansion of Mr. Rumini, when, after doing justice (as the reporters say) to the good things spread before us, one of the groomsmen proposed the health of the bride and groom .--Thereupon all rose and saluted them; the immediate family approached and embraced them, while a band of muric of 60 pieces, (which remained at the chateau for four days) gave forth three times a series of musical hurrahs. These combined with the cheers of the guests, were mosteff-otive. Subsequently the neads of the two families and the attendants were toasted; after which the party separated until evening, when we again assembled for a dance. The waltz, polks, and quadrille in turn became the order of the the Whiskey for which this locality has been evening, winding up with the graceful ma- long celebrated It is perfectly pure, beyond zurka, a dance unknown with us, and which all doubt, being made exclusively of tye, hops, it is greatly to be regretted some Monsieur and barley-malt, with the utmost care. by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves oneeighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay: or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly one half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of THE CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE This company commenced issuing Policie against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th a March, 1854, since which time over five thou sand seven hundred persons have insured and be
